Agenda 360 is a regional action plan designed to collaboratively transform Cincinnati USA into a leading metropolitan region for talent, jobs, and economic opportunity for all who call the region home by the year 2020. Agenda 360 has three overarching goals:

- Keep talented workers in the region and attract new ones;
- Grow new jobs and retain existing jobs and
- Provide economic opportunity and a good quality of life for everyone.

Key measures of success:

- Talent: 150,000 additional 20-34 year olds in the region’s workforce
- Jobs: 200,000 net new jobs in the region
- Economic Opportunity: Gainful employment for 90 percent of our labor force by 2020

Agenda 360 works closely with Vision 2015, a similar plan for growing Northern Kentucky’s economy, bringing the work to a regional scale. Both organizations use collective impact as their framework for transformative change.

The Office of New Americans (ONA) is dedicated to improving services and engaging Chicago’s global immigrant communities through enhanced collaboration with community organizations, academic institutions, and the private sector. Through the creation of the ONA, the City has affirmed and strengthened its support for immigrant communities, entrepreneurs, and businesses.

The ONA has undertaken a series of initiatives and administrative reforms to achieve Mayor Rahm Emanuel’s goal of making Chicago the most immigrant-friendly city in the country, including launching the New Americans Small Business Series that fostered small business growth in immigrant communities, and creating Citizenship Corners and Citizenship Hubs at Chicago Public Libraries to host citizenship workshops and disseminate information on the naturalization process. Most recently, the City of Chicago opened up nearly 23,000 internship and job opportunities for DREAMers, or undocumented youth, and has begun accepting applications for approximately 500 City internships, volunteer, and job opportunities offered year-round, 30 Mayor’s Office Fellowships, and more than 22,000 opportunities to participate in summer jobs, internships, and job training programs offered through the One Summer Chicago program.

Immigrant Welcome Center (IWC) was established in 2006 in Indianapolis, as a direct result of the growing immigrant and refugee population and an increased demand for support and resources. Today the organization is focused on strengthening immigrant families and supporting and implementing activities that build community.

In doing so, IWC runs a ‘Natural Helpers Program’ in which trained immigrant volunteers work within communities to connect newcomers to the basic services, educational programs, employment opportunities and information on housing that they need to feel welcomed and be successful. With five branches in existing community-based sites, IWC is helping to increase outreach efforts in neighborhoods where there is a high concentration of immigrants. These branches improve access to information and resources to individuals and families. Every month, IWC hosts community workshops and education sessions on a variety of cross-cultural topics intended to increase community knowledge and awareness about diversity issues. Session topics are geared towards foreign-born and U.S.-born residents. IWC is working in partnership with Welcoming America.

The St. Louis Mosaic Project (originally called the Immigration & Innovation Initiative) started with research from Professor Jack Strauss of St. Louis University in 2012 showing that the region was #19 in MSA population but #43 in number of foreign born, with less than 5% foreign born in the region. And, because the foreign born have higher levels of college and advanced degrees plus are more likely to start businesses, St. Louis is missing economic and cultural growth. In addition, in 2012 a Steering Committee of 22 regional leaders from government, business, education, and social services was commissioned by the Mayor and County Executive to develop a plan. The International Institute of St. Louis, serving 7,000 immigrants (including refugees) annually, is a key Steering Committee member. In 2013, another study from Professor Strauss made 9 recommendations on how to attract more foreign born. The newly renamed St. Louis Mosaic Project hired a Director in 2013, Betsy Cohen, and housed it within the World Trade Center-St. Louis, part of the regional St. Louis Economic Development Partnership. The Steering Committee continues to meet and support with a range of financial and programmatic resources. St. Louis Mosaic Ambassadors of local welcoming supporters passed 350 people, both native born and foreign born. The Professional Connector Program links professional globally minded leaders with skilled immigrants for networking information in the immigrant’s job search. At the request of corporate leaders in town, a new Woman’s Connector Program introduces wives of international corporate leaders who moved to town to a local university woman’s club for immediate entry into a learning and social welcoming group of women. Programs in development to launch fall 2013 include initiatives to get more international students to be hired by local companies and a program for immigrant entrepreneurs, for both high tech and neighborhood businesses.

With the support and participation of human resource departments, recruiting firms, elected officials, professional organizations, employee resource groups, universities, colleges and civic groups, Vibrant Pittsburgh is attracting diverse talent to the region and increasing the flow of diverse candidates pursuing opportunities with local employers. The organization’s retention efforts include a Welcome Center with newcomer programs; strategic partnerships with Affinity Groups that serve as magnets for more diverse talent; community engagement initiatives that promote the region’s diverse communities and support networks to create an environment where people of all backgrounds can come, pursue a career and thrive. The Welcome Dayton Plan – written by the community and endorsed by the City Commission - was established in 2011. It provides a broad policy framework for creating a more welcoming and inclusive environment for immigrants. Welcome Dayton connects projects already underway, while also promoting new initiatives, creating a community-fueled, collaborative agenda to transform Dayton into an immigrant-friendly city.

Since its formation, Welcome Dayton has increased positive community police relations, built community through the arts, increased access to services for limited English proficient residents, changed perceptions of immigrants through positive media coverage, and built awareness of existing immigrant friendly services offered throughout the private and public sectors.
The Welcoming Center for New Pennsylvanians connects newly arrived individuals from around the world with the economic opportunities that they need to succeed in our region. Since opening our doors in 2003, we have assisted more than 11,000 people from over 140 countries.

We believe that a steady influx of new customers, workers, and entrepreneurs can reinvigorate Pennsylvania’s aging population, renew its neighborhoods, and re-energize our economy. By making Pennsylvania a magnet for immigrants, we will become a more vibrant, more creative, and more dynamic competitor in today’s global economy.

Our mission is clear - to be a centralized resource and referral center for the region’s growing immigrant community by promoting immigrant participation in the area’s political, social, and economic life. To that end, we work closely with the many regional organizations that have a stake in immigration. These include government agencies, service providers, employers, business associations, trade unions and economic development groups.

Our data-driven approach draws on our own and others’ research to inform local, state and national policy and practice. In response to national interest in our program model and tools, the Welcoming Center provides technical assistance and training on a consulting basis.

Welcome Springfield and the Midwest Consortium for Immigration Research are two new entities located in southwestern Ohio that are dedicated to the economic empowerment of immigrants in Ohio and throughout the Midwest. Welcome Springfield is a nonprofit 501(c)(3) organization devoted to helping Clark County Ohio attract and serve immigrants and the businesses that employ them. Clark County is a rural county that has lost 20,000 residents (-13%) since 1970. Its principle city, Springfield was recently identified as one of ten fastest shrinking cities in America and is projected to lose nearly 10,000 more residents during the next 15 years. The Midwest Consortium for Immigration Research (MCIR) is a brand new entity devoted to providing academic research to communities like Springfield and Clark County throughout the Midwest. We desire to complement the efforts of organizations like Global Great Lakes by providing objective data on the economic impact of immigration, and by helping communities develop strategies to recruit immigrants and maximize their economic impact. MCIR will be based at Wright State University in Dayton, Ohio and will serve researchers and communities across the Midwest.
